Fund Manager's Report
Market Review

The fund's NAV increased by 1.20% in January. Equity return was broadly negative in January due to the expectations of a more acute tightening by the Fed, escalating geopolitical tensions and rising yields. Emerging markets outperformed developed markets and Hong Kong stocks outperformed other equity markets with positive return. In Hong Kong dollars, Hang Seng Index gained by 1.73% while CSI 300 and S&P 500 retreated by 7.76% and 5.26% in the month. As to sectors in Hang Seng Index, most of the sectors obtained positive return, Energy, Financials and Communication Services sectors significantly outperformed other sectors.

Market Outlook

China 4Q21 GDP rose 4.0% yoy which is higher than expectation. Data saw solid growth in industrial production and trade activity. However, retail sales continued to be weak on the back of weak consumer sentiment and stringent social distancing ahead of the Winter Olympics. 1Q22 is a critical window period for China to enhance growth-stabilizing policies including proactive fiscal policy and prudent monetary policy. We expect risk appetite of the Hong Kong stock market will improve in 2022 and growth-stabilizing policies will catalyze the recovery of Hong Kong equities in 1Q22. We will adjust portfolio structure accordingly. We will keep balanced allocation between growth stocks and value stocks and also optimize positions with attractive valuation and high dividend picks. We focus on cyclical stocks which will benefit from policy support and domestic demanded-related stocks with sound fundamentals.
