Fund Manager's Report
Market Review

The fund's NAV increased by 30.50% in November. With the announcement of revised COVID control optimization measures, Chinese equities rebounded strongly in November. Overseas, the U.S. inflation pressure eased and the market expected that the radical rate hike may come to an end. In Hong Kong dollars, Hang Seng Index, CSI 300 and S&P 500 gained by 26.62%, 12.49% and 4.81% correspondingly in the month. As to sectors in Hang Seng Index, most of the sectors obtained positive return.

Market Outlook

China's economic activity and business sentiment further deteriorated in November as PMI dropped to the lowest level since May. The politburo meeting in November indicated a policy shift from COVID control to boosting growth next year. With the implement of the relief policy to support the real estate, China's economy may see a gradually pick up next year. Hong Kong stocks may still be volatile in the short term and we will keep track clear policy signals and adjust portfolio structure accordingly. We will keep balanced allocation between growth stocks and value stocks. We focus on Consumption Internet leaders with attractive valuation and stable fundamentals and sectors which benefit from economy recovery and reopening.
