Fund Manager's Report
Market Review

The fund's NAV increased by 2% in June. China's economy growth was expected to weaken marginally and the RMB exchange rate continued to fluctuate. Therefore, China equity market continued to fluctuate in June. In Hong Kong dollars, Hang Seng Index and S&P 500 increased by 3.74% and 6.55% while CSI 300 slightly retreated by 0.75% in the month. As to sectors in Hang Seng Index, most of the sectors got positive return with Materials, Industrials and Communication Services sectors outstandingly performing while Health Care sector performed worst with negative return.

Market Outlook

China's Manufacturing PMI slightly improved in June which still remained in the contraction territory and fallen below market expectations. Service sector continued to expand, albeit at a slower pace compared to previous months. Chinese authorities already moderately ease policy with additional LPR cut by 10bps and specific measures to boost consumption. With continuous recovery in service activity and moderate policy easing, China's economy is expected to improve in 2H23. Overseas, the better-than-expected performance of the U.S. economy has boosted expectation that the Fed will restart interest rate hikes in July, adding pressure on the RMB exchange rate. We will keep track policy signals and adjust portfolio structure accordingly. We focus on Technology leaders and Consumption sectors with attractive valuation and sound fundamentals.
