Fund Manager's Report
Market Review

The fund's NAV increased by 6.87% in February. With the active implementation of policies and the domestic economy showed signs of bottoming out, the Chinese equity market gradually ushered in recovery conditions this month. In Hong Kong dollars, Hang Seng Index and CSI 300 increased by 6.63% and 9.21% correspondingly in the month. As to sectors in Hang Seng Index, most of the sectors got positive return with Information Technology, Consumption and Materials sectors outstandingly performing while Energy sector performed worst with negative return.

Market Outlook

China's manufacturing PMI sustained below 50 in February. New order and export order continued to deteriorate as both overseas and domestic demand remained dismal. We expect continuous easing on macro policy going forward. Fiscal policy will be moderately strengthened and monetary policy will continue to be moderately loose. The Two Sessions in early March are expected to release more policies and measures to support economy. We will keep track clear policy signals and latest company results to adjust portfolio structure accordingly. While maintaining the allocation on high dividend blue chips, we still focus on Technology leaders and Internet sector which benefit from policy efforts and improving economy expectations.
